Dear Hiring Manager,

What drew me to Pacific Office Automation's L&D Specialist role is the combination of hands-on facilitation and data-driven program evaluation reporting to an Organizational Development leader—that's exactly the kind of structured, evidence-based L&D environment where I do my best work.

I've spent the last three years in program management and learning operations roles where designing training, facilitating workshops, and tracking effectiveness metrics were core to the job. At InGenius Prep, I built and maintained a self-service knowledge base for 70+ cross-functional staff—cutting onboarding time by 75%—and facilitated training webinars for 600+ participants, sustaining a 78% enrollment rate through iterative feedback loops. I know how to coordinate logistics, build training materials from scratch, and analyze completion data to drive continuous improvement.

What I bring beyond execution is an analytical lens on learning. I naturally reach for Excel to understand what the data says—whether it's tracking training completion across a new product launch or identifying which workshops moved the needle on performance. I also have direct experience partnering with subject matter experts to lead content development sessions and building out SOPs and guides that actually get used.

POA's 25% travel requirement sounds like the kind of facilitation-forward role that keeps the work grounded in real people and real branches—not just slide decks. I'd love to bring that same energy and rigor to your team.

Thank you for your time. I look forward to connecting.
