Dear Gusto Hiring Team,

Learning & development isn't just about delivering a great session—from my experience, it's about a continuous cycle of diagnosing where capability gaps actually live, designing cohort experiences that close them, and refining the program with data until the outcomes are measurable. With a background in program management, facilitation, and evidence-based design, I'm excited to bring that to Gusto's CX Learning & Development team.

At InGenius Prep, I own the end-to-end implementation of 20+ learning programs, driving continuous improvement through data and feedback toward measurable outcomes. I facilitate live cohort-based training and webinars for 600+ participants (78% enrollment rate), run needs assessments with 25 global stakeholders to identify learning gaps and design new programs, and develop guides and learning materials—increasingly with AI tools—that reduced onboarding time by 75%. Owning multiple cohort-based programs at scale is the center of my work.

At NextGen Healthcare, I led a manager effectiveness initiative that translated 2,000+ responses into reports shaping L&D strategy, and delivered five cross-functional projects spanning survey design, recognition, and learning—deepening my conviction that strong L&D is data-informed first.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I piloted an Inclusive Leadership workshop for 12 senior leaders that scaled to 23 global locations, early evidence that I can design and facilitate leadership-development experiences that travel.

This is how I approach work—uniquely grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC): I diagnose with data to find capability gaps, collaborate with stakeholders to design solutions, and track metrics to ensure learning sticks. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Gusto's mission to grow the small business economy—and the chance to build facilitation and programs that level up the CX team—are both genuine draws. I'd love to bring this methodology to your learning org.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
