Dear Gusto Hiring Team,

Onboarding isn't just about getting someone set up—from my experience, it's about a continuous cycle of understanding what a customer is really trying to do, guiding them to their first win, and refining the path with empathy and data so they keep moving forward. With a background in program enablement, customer-facing onboarding, and consultative service, I'm excited to bring that energy to Gusto's team.

At InGenius Prep, I guide customers and stakeholders through onboarding milestones across 20+ programs, building documentation that reduced onboarding time by 75%. I identify customer needs and run outreach that yields 40+ new leads monthly, deliver live training for 600+ participants, and use AI tools daily for communications and feedback analysis—exactly the consultative, AI-enabled, customer-first rhythm this role lives in.

At Kronos Research, I engaged talent through personalized communication and customer service, increasing applications by 566% in two months—early proof that I can move people toward action by genuinely meeting them where they are.

At NextGen Healthcare, I analyzed 2,000+ experiences to amplify customer voice and guide decisions, reinforcing my habit of letting data, not assumptions, shape how I help people.

This is how I approach work—uniquely grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC): I diagnose with data to understand where customers get stuck, collaborate to design the right next step, and track outcomes to keep improving. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Gusto's mission to grow the small business economy—and the chance to help business owners reach milestones like their first payroll—are both genuine draws. I'd love to bring this care and curiosity to your customers.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
