Dear Notion Hiring Team,

Great enablement isn't just about producing content—from my experience, it's about translating strategy into programs, playbooks, and training that actually change behavior in the field, then measuring whether they worked. With a background spanning program management, enablement, and organizational development, I'm excited to bring that outcome-focused approach to Notion as your first Enablement Program Manager embedded with Customer Success.

At InGenius Prep, I own the end-to-end roadmap for 20+ enablement programs, translating priorities into training, playbooks, and reinforcement. I design and deliver high-quality learning experiences—live sessions, workshops, and self-serve resources—for 600+ participants, and I build the playbooks, guides, and templates that frontline teams actually use. Critically, I establish the measurement and feedback loops (readiness, adoption, enrollment) that drove a 78% program enrollment rate—because I treat behavior change, not content shipped, as the real outcome.

At NextGen Healthcare, I diagnosed performance gaps by analyzing 2,000+ employee experiences and defining the behaviors that mattered most, then led a manager-effectiveness initiative that turned data into manager activation and measurable improvement. Partnering with leaders to diagnose first, then enable, is exactly how I'd approach the CS role evolution.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I designed and facilitated an Inclusive Leadership workshop later scaled to 23 global locations—proof I can build a program that lands consistently across teams and contexts.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC): I diagnose with data, collaborate cross-functionally on solutions, and track metrics to ensure real progress. As a daily Notion user excited by how tools shape how people work, and an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, the chance to be the first enablement partner for CS as it evolves toward deeper AI-workflow adoption is a genuine draw. I'd love to help your CSMs feel confident, capable, and ready.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
