Dear OHSU Hiring Team,

Learning and organizational development isn't just about running classes—from my experience, it's a continuous cycle of diagnosing where people struggle, designing evidence-based learning that meets them where they are, and refining it through feedback and data. With a background in program enablement, organizational development, and a master's in Applied Organizational Psychology, I'm genuinely excited to bring that systematic, human-centered approach to OHSU's Learning & Organizational Development team.

At InGenius Prep, designing and delivering learning is my core work. I run needs assessments with 25+ stakeholders to find capability gaps, then build the materials to close them—guides, handouts, and workflows for 70+ staff that cut onboarding time by 75%. I've also stood up a new training program end to end, instructing live sessions both virtual and in person and producing instructional videos that reached 500+ participants, while facilitating webinars for 600+ learners and tracking a 78% enrollment rate. Applying adult-learning principles to design content that drives real behavior change is what I do every day.

At NextGen Healthcare, I delivered internal training on DEI, Inclusive Leadership, and performance review, and led a manager-effectiveness initiative that translated 2,000+ employee responses into reports shaping engagement strategy—work that deepened my commitment to equity and belonging as a foundation of healthy organizations. At Vestas Wind Systems, I launched an Inclusive Leadership workshop for senior leaders that scaled to 23 global locations.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC) and undergraduate background in Education Studies: I treat learning as a system. I diagnose with data, collaborate cross-functionally on solutions, and track metrics to ensure learning sticks and skills hold. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, I'm drawn to OHSU's mission and its commitment to being an anti-racist organization that values diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging—and as a Portland resident, I'd be proud to support the people who deliver care here. I'd love to bring this methodology to your team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
