Dear Brex Hiring Team,

A successful implementation isn't just about a clean go-live—from my experience, it's about scoping the real outcomes a customer needs, then driving adoption through discovery, cross-functional collaboration, and follow-through long after launch. With a background spanning program management, consulting, and stakeholder enablement, I'm excited to bring that systems-minded approach to Brex as an Enterprise Implementation Consultant.

At InGenius Prep, I manage end-to-end implementations for 20+ programs: I scope outcomes, build project plans, and oversee delivery across Marketing, Tech, and Sales teams. One launch taught me the most—I rolled out a new sales process with a full document library and assumed adoption would follow. It didn't. I went back, interviewed the users, found the real blocker was friction not resistance, and built a one-pager that lifted usage. That's the lesson I carry into every rollout: assumption is the most expensive thing in implementation.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I optimized onboarding across 3 global locations through process analysis, and piloted an Inclusive Leadership change initiative that scaled to 23 locations by building awareness, finding champions, and reinforcing the change over time. In my ODN consulting work, I run discovery workshops and stakeholder interviews to diagnose what's actually broken before designing a fix—the same advisory posture an enterprise customer needs.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC), which trained me to treat every rollout as a system: I diagnose with data where adoption stalls, collaborate cross-functionally on the solution, and track results to make sure they hold. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, the chance to guide enterprise customers through high-stakes launches at Brex is a genuine draw. I'd love to bring this methodology to your Implementation team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
