Dear Brex Hiring Team,

Good screening and monitoring work isn't just about clearing alerts—from my experience, it's about looking closely at the data, asking what doesn't add up, and tightening the controls and documentation so the right things get caught. With a background built on data analysis, operational rigor, and cross-functional problem-solving, I'm excited to bring that careful, investigative mindset to Brex as a Screening and TM Associate.

In my ODN consulting work, I dug into the data others took for granted: as part of a consulting team supporting an HR client, I helped audit 300+ cases and quantify $362K in costs—work that overturned assumptions everyone had accepted. That's the instinct I'd bring to alert review: don't take the surface answer, examine the evidence. At InGenius Prep, I run end-to-end operations for 20+ programs and create the documentation and SOPs for 70+ staff, standardizing controls and catching issues early through enrollment and feedback data. When something looks off, I work cross-functionally with Marketing, Tech, and Sales teams to find the root cause, not just the symptom.

My earliest exposure to finance came at Kronos Research, a quantitative trading firm, where I learned how fast-paced and detail-intensive that environment is. I'll be candid—I haven't held a formal AML or transaction-monitoring title, but I pick up new systems and domains quickly, I use AI tools daily, and the core of this work—careful data analysis, sound judgment, and clear documentation—is exactly what I do well.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC), which trained me to treat problems as systems to investigate: I diagnose with data, collaborate cross-functionally on the fix, and track results to make sure they hold. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, the chance to protect Brex and its customers through rigorous screening is a genuine draw. I'd love to bring this methodology to your Operations team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
