Dear Duolingo Hiring Team,

Good strategy work isn't just about producing a recommendation—from my experience, it's about defining the real problem first, pressure-testing it with data, and turning ambiguity into a framework that cross-functional partners can act on. With a background spanning OD consulting, program management, and analytics, I'm excited to bring that diagnose-before-design approach to Duolingo as a Manager, Strategy & Business Operations.

In my ODN consulting work, I live in ambiguity by design: I walk into organizations with open questions and leave with frameworks. As part of a consulting team, I helped run hypothesis-driven diagnosis for an HR client—auditing 300+ cases to quantify $362K and overturn assumptions everyone had accepted. For a separate NGO client, I ran focus groups and 1:1 interviews, then analyzed the qualitative data to surface the real issues around decision-making and accountability. That's the core of strategy and business operations: figure out what's actually true before anyone commits resources.

At NextGen Healthcare, I defined and led a self-started initiative—analyzing 2,000+ data points to identify the single biggest driver of engagement, then packaging it into a report that informed C-suite decisions. At InGenius Prep, I manage operations across 20+ programs in rapid cycles, partnering with Marketing, Tech, and Sales leaders to align on priorities and make trade-offs. I'm comfortable moving fast with incomplete information and adjusting as the data comes in.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC), which trained me to treat business problems as systems to study: I diagnose with data, collaborate cross-functionally on the solution, and track the metrics that prove it worked. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Duolingo's mission to make education universally available—and the chance to shape strategy for a product I genuinely admire—are both real draws. I'd love to bring this methodology to your Strategy & Business Operations team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
