Dear Duolingo Hiring Team,

Great recruiting isn't just about filling reqs—from my experience, it's about reading the talent market through data, building genuine relationships, and continuously refining the search through close partnership with hiring managers. With a background spanning recruiting, HR, and program management, I'm excited to bring that systems-minded, people-first approach to Duolingo as a Recruiter II.

At Kronos Research, I owned a challenging international search end-to-end: I drafted job descriptions, posted openings, and researched global compensation, then engaged passive candidates through personalized outreach—work that grew applications 566% in two months. I also organized recruiting events and moderated C-suite panels at top universities, reaching 230+ students and 80+ applicants. That taught me sourcing is a craft built on organization and follow-through.

At InGenius Prep, I run multiple concurrent programs in close partnership with Marketing, Tech, and Sales stakeholders—owning timelines, using enrollment and feedback data to monitor pipeline health, and using AI tools like ChatGPT daily to streamline my workflows. Managing many parallel workstreams without dropping a thread is exactly what high-volume recruiting demands. At Vestas Wind Systems, I delivered HR solutions across recruiting, headcount, and succession planning, so I see hiring as one lever in a broader people strategy.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC), which trained me to treat hiring as a system: I diagnose with data where a pipeline stalls, collaborate cross-functionally on the fix, and track metrics to make sure they hold. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Duolingo's mission to make education universally available—and the chance to bring great people in to build it—are both genuine draws. I'd love to bring this methodology to your Talent team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
