Dear Suno Hiring Team,

Sourcing isn't just about finding names on LinkedIn—from my experience, it's about understanding a role deeply enough to know who'd thrive in it, then reaching them with outreach genuine enough to earn a reply. With a background spanning recruiting, program operations, and organizational development, I'm excited to bring that mix of analytical pipeline-building and human warmth to Suno as a Talent Sourcer.

At Kronos Research, I sourced and engaged global talent for a genuinely hard-to-fill international role: I drafted the job description, researched competitive compensation, and built a pipeline through personalized, compelling outreach that helped increase applications by 566% in two months. I learned that the best outreach isn't volume—it's understanding what motivates someone and speaking to it. I also organized recruiting events and moderated C-suite panels, reaching 230+ students and 80+ applicants.

At InGenius Prep, I partner with stakeholders across Marketing, Tech, and Sales teams to understand requirements and build targeted strategies, and I track and analyze metrics to optimize pipeline quality and conversion. I thrive when priorities shift fast—my OD consulting work is ambiguous by design—and I use AI tools daily to work smarter without losing the human touch. Sourcing across engineering, product, design, and GTM in a fast-moving startup is exactly the kind of breadth I love.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC), which trained me to treat sourcing as a system: I diagnose with data where the pipeline thins, collaborate with hiring managers on the fix, and track results to make sure they hold. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Suno's mission to let everyone feel the joy of making music—and the chance to help build the team behind it from this early stage—are both genuine draws. I'd love to help you reach the people who'll shape what Suno becomes.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
