Dear AllTrails Hiring Team,

The best People Operations work runs on good data and reliable systems—clean records, analysis that surfaces what's really happening, and cyclical programs that run on time. That's the work I love, and as a Portland-based outdoors person, getting to do it for AllTrails would be a genuine joy.

Data and people-operations have anchored my work throughout. At NextGen Healthcare, I analyzed 2,000+ employee experiences and turned manager-effectiveness feedback into reports that guided C-suite decisions. At Organization Development Network (ODN) Oregon, I analyzed 300+ leave cases to surface $362K in costs that drove policy redesigns. And at InGenius Prep, I manage the operations of 20+ programs, build cross-functional processes and documentation for 70+ staff (cutting onboarding time 75%), and run feedback loops to optimize delivery. I'm comfortable across HRIS tools (SAP, Rippling, ADP) and lean on Excel, Google Sheets, and SPSS for analysis.

What ties it together is a systems-minded, people-first approach grounded in my background in organizational psychology (MS, USC): I like turning messy people data into clear insight, keeping operations and cyclical programs running smoothly, and partnering across teams to make the systems actually work. I'd be excited to bring that to AllTrails' People team.

Warmly,

Jamie Cheng
