Dear MyPlanAdvocate People Operations Team,

I was genuinely drawn to the People & Talent HR Associate role because it sits right where I do my best work: owning the employee lifecycle end to end, with care for the people behind every record and request. Your line about "developing a customer and employee experience that endeavors to improve the lives of everyone we work with" resonates with me—I came into this field through organizational psychology because I believe the employee experience is built in exactly these moments: a smooth first day, a leave handled with dignity, a clear answer to a worried question.

The core of this role maps directly to what I do today. At InGenius Prep I build and maintain the onboarding SOPs, guides, and self-service knowledge base for 70+ cross-functional staff, work that reduced onboarding time by 75%—so new-hire orientation, document management, and HRIS/ATS data integrity are already my day-to-day (I work in Rippling, alongside SAP and ADP). At Vestas Wind Systems I optimized onboarding across three global locations, supported employee-relations cases, and ensured compliance with local labor laws and confidentiality, which is where I learned that compliance work like I-9 verification and leave administration only works when it is both meticulous and humane.

Leave-of-absence administration is a genuine strength I'd bring on day one. In my pro bono consulting with the Organization Development Network (ODN) Oregon, I analyzed 300+ leave cases to surface $362K in costs and helped the HR team turn that into policy redesigns—so FMLA, ADA, parental, and state-specific leave programs are familiar terrain, not a learning curve. I'm equally comfortable being the steady, accurate point of contact employees come to with benefits and policy questions.

What excites me about MyPlanAdvocate specifically is the mission of improving lives for underserved populations—it's the kind of place where People Operations isn't back-office paperwork but a real lever for an inclusive culture. I'd love to bring my onboarding, leave-administration, and HRIS experience to support your team and the people it serves.

Warm regards,
