Dear Asana Hiring Team,

Customer enablement isn't just about training people to use a product—from my experience, it's about a continuous cycle of diagnosing where customers struggle, designing programs grounded in real data, and collaborating cross-functionally to drive measurable adoption and long-term success. With a background spanning needs assessment design, multi-stakeholder training delivery, and program management across global teams, I'm excited to bring that same combination of analytical rigor and people-first facilitation to Asana as a Customer Enablement Manager.

At InGenius Prep, I built and ran the full enablement function for our educational programs. I conducted needs assessments with 25+ global stakeholders to identify learning gaps and design three new programs, developed guides and workflows for 70+ cross-functional staff that cut onboarding time by 75%, and facilitated training webinars for 600+ participants—achieving a 78% client conversion rate that became a key performance benchmark for the team. Managing 20+ programs and 10+ vendors simultaneously taught me how to balance strategic program positioning with the day-to-day operational details that determine whether enablement actually sticks.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I piloted an Inclusive Leadership workshop for 12 senior leaders that was later scaled to 23 global locations—a clear sign that when enablement is grounded in real stakeholder input, it earns organizational trust and expands. I also directed an M&A project overseeing cross-functional stakeholders, and streamlined onboarding across 3 global locations by conducting process analyses and clarifying role responsibilities. That experience gave me a deep appreciation for designing programs that hold up across diverse audiences and contexts.

At NextGen Healthcare, I translated 2,000+ employee experience data points into C-suite insights on satisfaction drivers, and supported internal training initiatives in DEI, Inclusive Leadership, and performance review. Designing consultations that informed strategic plans—not just one-off sessions—is the kind of high-leverage enablement work I'm drawn to, and what I'd bring to Asana's customer relationships.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC)—I treat enablement challenges as systems: I diagnose with data where adoption breaks down, collaborate with stakeholders to co-design solutions, and track key metrics to ensure programs actually move the needle. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Asana's mission to help teams do their best work—and the opportunity to be the bridge between product capability and real customer success—are both strong draws. I'd love to bring this methodology to your team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
