Dear Whatnot Hiring Team,

Recruiting operations isn't just about keeping the hiring pipeline moving—from my experience, it's about building the systems, documentation, and cross-functional processes that make recruiting scalable, consistent, and data-informed. With a background spanning program management, process design, vendor coordination, and stakeholder needs assessment, I'm excited to bring that same operational rigor to Whatnot as a Program Manager, Recruiting Operations.

At InGenius Prep, I served as the operational backbone for 20+ educational programs and 10+ vendor partnerships simultaneously. I built cross-functional processes and documentation for 70+ staff that reduced onboarding time by 75%, ran continuous improvement cycles through stakeholder needs assessments, and managed program positioning and communications strategy via structured feedback analysis. Coordinating across multiple teams while keeping program operations running smoothly—and identifying where the processes themselves needed redesigning—was the daily reality of that role.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I directed an M&A integration project overseeing cross-functional stakeholders across global offices, streamlined onboarding across 3 global locations through process analysis and role-clarity work, and supported an Inclusive Leadership pilot that expanded to 23 global sites. Working inside a complex, fast-moving global org taught me that clean operations depend on two things: clear ownership and a commitment to continuously closing the gap between how things are documented and how they actually run.

At NextGen Healthcare, I translated 2,000+ employee experience data points into actionable C-suite insights, and contributed to five cross-functional projects spanning survey development, rewards, and L&D. Turning raw feedback into structured recommendations that leadership could act on is the kind of diagnostic work that also applies directly to improving how a recruiting function operates.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC)—I diagnose operational gaps with data, collaborate cross-functionally to design solutions, and track metrics to ensure programs actually improve over time. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Whatnot's fast-paced, high-growth environment and the challenge of building recruiting operations that scale with the business—both draw me in. I'd love to bring this methodology to your team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
