Dear Asana Hiring Team,

Implementation work isn't just about onboarding a customer to a new tool—from my experience, it's about guiding people through change, which requires diagnosing how they actually work, building trust through cross-functional collaboration, and continuously measuring whether the adoption is sticking. With a background spanning program management, stakeholder consultation, and change management, I'm excited to bring that same combination of analytical rigor and people-first facilitation to Asana as an Implementation Manager.

At InGenius Prep, I managed 15+ educational programs end-to-end—collaborating with Sales, Operations, and 8 vendors to coordinate delivery, refine positioning, and track performance. I ran needs assessments with 25+ global stakeholders to continuously surface gaps and redesign programs to better fit their needs, and developed learning materials and workflows that enabled 70 staff members and cut onboarding time by 75%. Facilitating training webinars for 600+ participants and achieving a 78% client conversion rate gave me direct experience turning skeptical audiences into engaged adopters—the same challenge at the core of enterprise implementation.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I directed a Mergers & Acquisitions project, coordinating cross-functional stakeholders through a complex organizational transition—navigating competing priorities, managing communication across teams, and keeping the change process on track despite ambiguity. I also led an Inclusive Leadership workshop that was piloted with 12 senior leaders and later scaled to 23 global sites, which required exactly the kind of change management facilitation—executive buy-in, iterative feedback, scaled rollout—that enterprise software implementation demands.

At NextGen Healthcare, I served as a consultant to internal teams, delivering recommendations on DEI, inclusive leadership, and performance review strategy, and conducting C-suite-level reporting on 2,000+ employee data points. That consulting work reinforced my belief that the most effective implementations combine data-driven diagnosis with human-centered facilitation—understanding what people actually struggle with before prescribing a solution.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC)—which trained me to treat adoption challenges as systems: I diagnose with data, collaborate cross-functionally on solutions, and track metrics to ensure real progress. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Asana's mission to help teams do their best work—and the opportunity to help enterprise clients unlock that potential—is a genuine draw. I'd love to bring this methodology to your implementation team.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
