Dear Ironclad Hiring Team,

People operations isn't just about keeping HR processes running—from my experience, it's about using data to identify where the employee experience breaks down, collaborating across functions to redesign it, and building the documentation and systems that make improvements stick. With a background in program operations, HRBP support, and cross-functional process design, I'm excited to bring that combination of analytical precision and people-first mindset to Ironclad as a People Operations Coordinator.

At InGenius Prep, I owned the operational infrastructure for 20+ programs running simultaneously. I built cross-functional processes and documentation for 70+ staff that reduced onboarding time by 75%, managed end-to-end program lifecycles with feedback loops built in, and facilitated listening sessions with 25+ global stakeholders to continuously align what we offered with what people actually needed. Keeping that volume of work organized—while staying close enough to the people side to catch what the data couldn't tell you—is the kind of coordination I find genuinely energizing.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I supported the HRBP team across onboarding optimization, an M&A integration project, and a global Inclusive Leadership pilot that scaled from 12 senior leaders to 23 global locations. I also helped strengthen employee experience through an award-winning well-being communications initiative recognized among 1,000+ competitors. That experience gave me a clear picture of how good people operations creates the conditions for everything else—engagement, retention, and culture—to follow.

At NextGen Healthcare, I contributed to five cross-functional projects spanning survey development, rewards & recognition, and L&D, and analyzed 2,000+ employee experience data points to surface insights for C-suite. Translating raw employee feedback into clear recommendations that leadership can act on is core to how I approach people operations: start with what the data says, then work across the organization to make it better.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC)—which shaped how I think about HR challenges as systems: I diagnose with data, collaborate to design solutions, and track metrics to verify that things actually improve. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, Ironclad's mission to make contract management smarter—and the opportunity to build people operations that support a high-growth team—are both strong draws. I'd love to contribute to that work.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
