Dear Hiring Team,

Wellness program coordination isn't just about scheduling events and managing spaces—from my experience, it's about diagnosing what a community actually needs, designing programs grounded in that evidence, and continuously refining them through feedback and cross-functional collaboration. With a background in program management, organizational development, and a deep commitment to equity-minded, human-centered approaches, I'm drawn to this Program Coordinator role at University of Oregon's Health Promotion and Wellness Services.

At InGenius Prep, I managed 20+ programs end-to-end—coordinating scheduling, staffing, vendor logistics, and communications simultaneously. I conducted needs assessments with 25+ global stakeholders to identify gaps and designed three new programs directly aligned with those needs. I also built workflows and guides for 70+ cross-functional staff, reducing onboarding time by 75%, and facilitated training sessions for 600+ participants across multiple formats. Managing the operational infrastructure of a high-volume, multi-program environment—keeping facilities, supplies, and schedules aligned—is where I thrive.

At NextGen Healthcare, I worked across 5 cross-functional projects spanning survey development, leadership training, rewards & recognition, and L&D programming, analyzing 2,000+ employee experience data points to surface insights that informed C-suite decisions. The pattern recognition and documentation skills I built there translate directly to the kind of data-driven health programming and outcome tracking the Duck Nest requires.

At Vestas Wind Systems, I optimized onboarding processes across 3 global locations by conducting gap analyses and clarifying responsibilities across teams, and launched an award-winning well-being communications initiative recognized among 1,000+ competitors. Designing initiatives that reach diverse populations—and ensuring they feel welcoming and useful—has been a throughline in my work.

My approach is grounded in my MS in Applied Organizational Psychology (USC)—which trained me to approach community and organizational challenges as systems: I diagnose with data, collaborate across functions on solutions, and track key metrics to ensure progress. As an analytical organizer with a growth mindset, the University of Oregon's commitment to health equity and the opportunity to coordinate programs that help students thrive are both what draw me to this role. I would bring the same rigor and genuine care to the Duck Nest community.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
