Dear Oregon State University Hiring Team,

A four-year full-tuition scholarship is the reason I was able to attend and graduate from college. The Freeman Asian Scholarship—and later the Tuck Bridge Scholarship—didn't just cover tuition; it opened a door I'm not sure I could have opened on my own. So when I read that the Scholarship Program Coordinator role centers on guiding Finish in Four scholars and helping students and families navigate scholarship opportunities, it felt personal. The Office of Scholarships' mission of increasing access and providing financial guidance is one I've lived from the other side, and I'd be honored to help students experience what I did.

This role is a strong match for how I already work. At InGenius Prep, I serve as a primary point of contact for students and program participants—advising on processes, deadlines, and requirements in person, by phone, and over email, and handling questions with patience and care. I coordinate 20+ programs end-to-end, manage applications and records, and troubleshoot process issues with campus and partner feedback in mind, always looking for ways to make things smoother. I'm comfortable presenting to audiences of all sizes, having facilitated outreach workshops and webinars for 600+ participants, and I'm at ease with the systems and data side of the work—maintaining accurate records, working in management platforms, and preparing clear materials. I also hold a valid driver's license and am glad to travel for outreach and recruitment events across Oregon.

My academic background reinforces the fit: a BA in Psychology and Education Studies from Wesleyan and a master's in Applied Organizational Psychology, plus a genuine commitment to educational equity in multicultural settings. I'll be candid that I haven't worked inside a financial-aid or scholarship office specifically, so platforms like ScholarDollars or Slate would be new to me—but I learn systems quickly, I bring real strength in student-facing service, program coordination, and clear communication, and I care deeply about this particular mission. I'd love the chance to bring that to the OSU Scholarship Office. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Jamie Cheng
