Dear LEAP Client Success Team,

You named the exact feeling that pulls me toward this work: the moment a complicated tool finally clicks for someone. Taking that one-to-one moment and turning it into a repeatable program thousands of firms can feel is, to me, the most satisfying kind of problem—part facilitation, part program operations, part measurement. That's why this Client Success Learning Program Manager role caught my attention.

At InGenius Prep, I run the live-learning-plus-operations side of exactly this kind of program. I host and facilitate live webinars for 600+ participants, translating complex workflows into confident user behavior, and I own program logistics end to end—scheduling, registration, reminders, attendance tracking, and follow-up across 20+ programs. I partner with 25+ stakeholders and subject-matter experts to run needs assessments and co-create role-based learning tracks, facilitator guides, and supporting materials, and I define success metrics and analyze engagement and completion data to keep improving content and delivery. At NextGen Healthcare I analyzed 2,000+ user experiences to guide leadership decisions, and at Organization Development Network (ODN) Oregon I help an HR team turn data into executive-ready insights—so a data-informed, measure-and-iterate habit runs through everything I do.

Two honest notes on fit: my facilitation and enablement experience has been with internal teams and program audiences rather than external software customers, so the customer-success context is one I'd be learning—and while I'm strong on lifecycle thinking and metrics, I haven't yet worked hands-on in Gainsight, which I'd be eager to ramp on quickly. What I bring is the durable core of the role: confident live facilitation, end-to-end program operations, SME-partnered curriculum building, and a genuine love of measurement, grounded in my background in organizational psychology (MS, USC, 3.95). I'd be glad to bring that to LEAP and grow into the rest fast.

Warmly,

Jamie Cheng
