Dear BCG People Team,

Strong talent work sits at the intersection of people and process—understanding what consultants and teams need, then building the systems, programs, and data behind the scenes that help them thrive. That's the work I care about, and it's why this Talent Senior Specialist role at BCG drew me in: the chance to bring a data-grounded, people-first approach to talent in a firm where People is genuinely strategic.

At Organization Development Network (ODN) Oregon, I work as a consultant—facilitating discovery interviews, analyzing data, and diagnosing root causes before recommending structural change. On one engagement I analyzed 300+ leave cases to surface $362K in costs that drove policy redesigns; on another I diagnosed decision-making and accountability gaps for an NGO leadership team. At NextGen Healthcare, I analyzed 2,000+ employee experiences to guide C-suite decisions on engagement and talent, and at InGenius Prep I manage 20+ programs and 10+ vendors, run needs assessments with 25+ stakeholders, and built workflows that cut onboarding time 75%.

What ties it together is a consultant's diagnostic discipline paired with a people-first instinct, grounded in my background in organizational psychology (MS, USC, 3.95): I use data and stakeholder partnership to understand where talent processes struggle, I design solutions that fit, and I keep measuring whether they work. I'd be honored to bring that to BCG's People team.

Warmly,

Jamie Cheng
