Dear Lightfox Games Hiring Team,

A great People & Operations Coordinator is the person who keeps the gears turning quietly in the background—coordinating people, processes, and the small details that make a team feel taken care of. That's the work I love, and it's why this role drew me in: the chance to support both recruiting and day-to-day operations for a growing studio where people clearly matter.

At InGenius Prep, I manage the end-to-end lifecycle of 20+ programs and coordinate 10+ vendors, keeping projects, logistics, and communications on track across cross-functional teams. I built guides and workflows for 70+ staff that reduced onboarding time by 75%, and I facilitate live training sessions for hundreds of participants—so coordinating people, schedules, and details is squarely in my wheelhouse. Earlier, at Vestas Wind Systems, I owned onboarding process improvements across three locations and supported recruiting-adjacent work, and during my HR internship at Kronos Research I ran job postings, recruiting events, and candidate communication that grew applications 566% in two months.

What ties it together is a people-first, organized approach grounded in my background in organizational psychology (MS, USC): I like understanding what a team actually needs, building simple systems that make work smoother, and being the dependable person others can count on. I'd be excited to bring that energy to Lightfox—keeping operations humming so the team can focus on building great games.

Warmly,

Jamie Cheng
